Seems to me to be essential to have at least a penetration of the DIA school if only to learn what's going on. I am looking at this more from bureaucratic sinagling rather than pure training - Let me have your views -

SUBJECT : News Release on Defense Intelligence School

1. You have asked for a rundown of our regular attendees in the various courses conducted by the U. S. Army Strategic Intelligence School and the Naval Intelligence School operating as elements of the newly created Defense Intelligence School. Since we have no current attendees in a student capacity, I think it may be beneficial to provide you with a brief resume indicating our uses in the past. This background can then support an opinion as to whether we are sending enough people to these courses.

2. With regard to the class conducted regularly by the Strategic Intelligence School, no persons have been in attendance as civilian students since 1956. Until that time, we usually enrolled in each class about 5 - 10 DD/I employees; most of them were from the then Office of Collection and Dissemination. About that time we developed our own Basic Intelligence Course for DD/I employees and it was generally agreed by Offices who formerly sponsored students for the SIS that the training needs at the introductory intelligence level could better be met internally.

3. When some significant change occurs in the SIS curriculum, we may wish to reexamine the possibility of using it again. CIA has contributed heavily to the SIS course of instruction from the inception of SIS, averaging some 100 separate lectures a year throughout the last 10 years. It is not exaggerating to say that it would have been extremely difficult if not impossible for SIS to operate over the years without the support it received from CIA. For your information, I am attaching a list of some of the regular speakers (who lecture four to eight times per year) at the SIS taken from the files maintained by the Orientation and Briefing Officer of OTR.

4. Because the Naval Intelligence School has a more varied curriculum, we have different reasons for being interested in its offerings from time to time.

a. There is a 6-months course of intelligence training conducted at Anacostia but we have had no expression of interest for the long course in the last 10 years. Our last student attended back in 1951

b. The NIS has also conducted a 10-week course in photo interpretation. At times this has been a very popular course for Agency employees. In 1956 - 1957, 15 different employees were assigned there for training. It is highly probable that NPIC will express interest in similar training in the near future, and undoubtedly they would view training at nearby Anacostia somewhat favorably. I note, however, that DOD Directive No. 5160.42 has just placed photographic interpretation training under the Armed Forces Air Intelligence Training Center, so the NIS would presumably discontinue photo interpretation training. Meanwhile, in the period since our heavy use in 1957, we have developed our own internal course on Map and Photo Interpretation. These offerings have generally been well subscribed.

c. In the field of language training at NIS we have few demands at present for attendance there even though their offerings include training in Arabic, Chinese, French, German, Portuguese, Russian, Spanish and Turkish. However, the class size in all but the Russian and Spanish courses is normally too small (only 6 students each) to provide an opportunity for our personnel to attend.

5. Nonetheless, I am of the definite opinion that there is benefit to availing ourselves of the cost-free facility at Anacostia. Apparently a principal objection within the Agency against the use of the NIS stems from the length of their present courses. Their language training now varies from a minimum of 19 weeks to 60 weeks fulltime instruction, but when their courses were shorter we occasionally placed persons there. Our last trainee at the Naval Intelligence School attended an 8-week Spanish course ending in April 1960. This particular employee's language training was then supplemented by tutorial instruction at Sanz School, thus indirectly supporting our position that a longer class is desirable for language training, even though a less popular choice from the supervisor's viewpoint.

6. Like Strategic Intelligence School, the Naval Intelligence School has also called upon this Agency for assistance in furnishing guest lecturers. With the Defense Intelligence School buildup, these requests for support at NIS seem to be increasing.

DEFENSE INTELLIGENCE SCHOOL
ESTABLISHED UNDER TERMS OF NEW DIRECTIVE

Establishment of the Defense Intelligence School as an advanced or post-graduate professional educational institution attached to the Defense Intelligence Agency is provided for in a directive (No. 5105.25) issued today by the Department of Defense.

No site has yet been selected for the new school. It will be commanded by a general or flag officer of brigadier general or equivalent rank.

Elements of the Defense Intelligence School are currently operating as part of the U. S. Army Strategic Intelligence School, located in the Main Navy Building, and at the Naval Intelligence School, Anacostia Annex of the U. S. Naval Station, both in Washington, D. C.

The Defense Intelligence School will conduct courses related to Department of Defense intelligence functions designed to prepare selected military officer and key civilian personnel for important command, staff and policy-making positions in the national and international security structure. It will also prepare such personnel for duty in the military attache system and assist the career development of personnel assigned to intelligence functions.

The Director of the Defense Intelligence Agency, under direction of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, will operate and control the Defense Intelligence School. He will also determine the level and scope of courses of instruction to be offered at the school, establish criteria for selection of students for resident courses, provide for correspondence courses, program, budget and the financial administration for the school. He will also select the Commandant from nominees submitted by the military departments.

Department of Defense Directive

SUBJECT

Defense Intelligence School

- References: (a) DoD Directive 5105. 21, "Defense Intelligence Agency"
(b) DoD Directive 4000. 19, "Basic Policies and Principles for Interservice Support"

I. PURPOSE

This directive provides for the establishment of the Defense Intelligence School (DIS) as a professional educational institution attached to the Defense Intelligence Agency (DIA).

II. MISSION

The DIS will conduct courses of instruction related to DoD intelligence functions designed to:

- A. Enhance the preparation of selected military officers and key DoD civilian personnel for important command, staff, and policy-making positions in the national and international security structure.
- B. Prepare DoD military and civilian personnel for duty in the military attache system.
- C. Assist the broad career development of DoD military and civilian personnel assigned to intelligence functions.

III. APPLICABILITY

The provisions of this directive apply to all components of DoD.

IV. FUNCTIONS AND RESPONSIBILITIES

Under the direction of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, the Director, DIA, shall:

- A. Operate and control the DIS.
- B. Determine the level and scope of courses of instruction to be offered by the DIS for both resident and non-resident use.
- C. Review on a periodic basis the courses and curricula of the DIS to insure accomplishment of the mission assigned.
- D. Establish for the DIS:
  - 1. The total enrollment and allocation of student quotas for resident courses.
  - 2. Criteria for selection of students for resident courses.
  - 3. Prerequisites and regulations for participation in correspondence courses.
- E. Reallocate unfilled quotas for resident courses at the DIS on an equitable basis.
- F. Select the Commandant, DIS, from nominees submitted by the military departments.
- G. Program, budget and provide financial administration for the DIS.
- H. Report annually to the Secretary of Defense on the operations of the DIS including recommendations as appropriate.

V. ADMINISTRATION

- A. The Commandant, DIS, will be a general or flag officer of brigadier general or equivalent rank. There will be no established system of inter-departmental rotation for this position.
- B. The Commandant and Deputy Commandants will normally be from different military departments.
- C. The staff and faculty of the DIS will be selected on an approximately equal basis from the military departments and will include such civilian associates as required.
- D. Personnel for the staff and faculty of the DIS will be assigned to the DIA for the DIS and will be subject to the approval of the Director, DIA.
- E. Administrative and logistic support furnished by a military department will be in accordance with the basic policies and principles established in DoD Directive 4000.19 (reference (b)).
- F. Pay, allowances, and permanent change of station travel costs of military personnel assigned to the staff and faculty of the DIS will be borne by the military department concerned.
- G. Pay, allowances, and travel costs of personnel participating in resident courses at the DIS will be borne by the sponsoring organization.

VI. AUTHORITY

The appropriate provisions of Section VI, DoD Directive 5105.21 (reference (a)) apply to the Director, DIA, and his designees, in the discharge of the functions and responsibilities assigned by this directive.

VII. EFFECTIVE DATE AND IMPLEMENTATION

- A. This directive is effective upon publication. Its provisions will be implemented as determined by the Director, DIA.
- B. When the Director, DIA, assumes a function or responsibility assigned by this directive, all DoD components will review their existing directives, instructions, and regulations for conformity; make necessary changes thereto within 90 days; and notify the Director, DIA, when changes are completed.
- C. The transfer of funds, equipment, personnel authorizations and civilian personnel and the arrangement for use of facilities incident to the establishment and operations of the DIS will be accomplished under established DoD procedures.
